

The missing link between LNC Training and LNC Success is the Application. It really does not matter what course you have taken, how long it was, how much it costs, or what credential you received. The most important piece that separates those who struggle from those with success is the application of the role of the legal nurse consultant. Think of it like this, you attended a university program to train you to be a nurse; you passed all the written exams but you never had to attend a clinical rotation or demonstrate proficiencies for skills required to perform your new role as a nurse. It would be like taking your first job in a clinical setting without having any exposure to the clinical environment. How successful do you think you would be?

One reason nurses do not see their dreams turn into realities is that their dreams never go beyond a vague wish or an idea of what they might do someday. Having a dream is only the seed of success. In order to achieve what you want, you must first decide what it is. Making clear decisions is tremendously powerful when deciding which direction to take.

The key to unlocking your dreams more than any other is knowing you can choose. You have complete control over your choices. We can dream any dream and take the necessary steps to see it become a reality. Any worthy goal requires a huge investment of time, effort, hard work, sacrifice, and energy. My dream involved long hours of research, taking courses, reading books to acquire a solid knowledge base that I developed into series of seminars, and workshops that help other nurses. Behind the accomplishment of every great dream is the story of some incredible investment, whether it's one of time, money, energy, or effort.

There are a lot of sincere gifted nurses out there who never quite achieve their dreams. I am dedicated to help nurses stay committed...no matter what to their dreams. Ken Blanchard, coauthor of The One Minute Manager, said:

There's a difference between interest and commitment. When you're interested in doing something, you do it only when it's convenient. When you're committed to something, you accept no excuses, only results.
